In the communications on our first page, theology and politics, or rather theologians and politicians, are dealt with. The Telegraph is independent of parties on both subjects, and we are gratified that "A CHURCHMAN," and "Lucius"-the latter of whom has been heard of before-have desired to be heard through our columns.

THE AVENUE AT MIDNIGHT.

We lately walked the pavements of the Avenue at midnight, when there were no sounds to be heard around save our own footsteps. There were stars and clouds above us, (the horizon of and disgust of the ruffians Dinsmore and Zimour hopes has always shown us both!) and there was the whisper of the wind through the boughs of the budding trees. But all was familiar to us, save the stillness of the Avenue; its walks were for once deserted, and the sight seemed so strange that we felt uncomfortable until our imagination began to summon up its throng of busy, thoughtful people. It seemed to us that we only imagined them into being, and yet it seemed that we had seen them all pass a thousand times before. Some of them were legislators-proud, haughty, arrogant, and dissipated, though at the same time crafty, plausible, and popularity-seeking. Some of them were the representatives of foreign governments, looking with a complaisant and patronising air on all around them, and fancying that, by means of a continued friendly intercourse with their respective nations, the country of which this is the capital might yet take a position among the intelligent and civilized of the earth. Some of them were high functionaries of our own Government, overpowered by the cup of oblivion, which so often causes them to forget that their power is but transitory, and that eternal political oblivion so surely awaits those who for a moment fail to remember by whom and for what they have been elevated to their high stations. Some of them were public officers of inferior grades, living for the enjoyment of the present hour, and looking to the future with no other light than the dim hope that the secretary next to be placed over them, be his political character what it might, would not frown upon them-and coaxing upon their own features the counterfeit of a smile with which to court and win his favor. And some of them were womenpretty, innocent women-evidently lost in the delusion that they were floating upon the billows of an elevated condition of society, where wealth and titles were universal, and pained only at the remembrance of their plebeian origin, and the homely pursuits of their parents and kindred; gentle, lovely, loving, faithful women, whom men so uniformly endeavor to lead into folly when about to make fools of

But every one wore the marks of anxious care upon the brow. All were covetous of the favor of others, or fearful they might lose it; and yet struggling to conceal even that which rested like a shadow upon each visage.

We were, at length, startled from our reverie by the approach of a figure. It was that of a miserable, tremulous old man, on whose back the finest of broadcloth seemed to have grown threadbare and ragged. He asked in humble terms for charity-for money to procure food and shelter. We gave it to him, and then

"Is your home in this city ?" "No," he replied; "I came here with expec-

"So did all these!" we involuntarily exclaimed; and then, hastening home, endeavored to hope, as we sank into sleep, that economy, display, and independence of spirit, might ere long be reconciled with the spirit of true democratic republicanism and the usages of the American people.

THE TELEGRAPHIC REPRIEVE!

At half-past nine o'clock, on the 14th of March, President Fillmore despatched the following message to the city of St. Louis:

"The Marshal of the district of Missouri hereby directed to postpone the execution of the Indian Sec-sec-sah-ma until Friday the 18th of MILLARD FILLMORE,
"President of the United States."

This message was received in St. Louis at ten minutes before ten, and the Marshal, on receiving it, issued the following order to Mr. W. D. Kerr, Deputy Marshal, Jefferson City:

"You are hereby directed to postpone the ex-ecution of the Indian prisoner See-see-sah-ma till Friday, the 18th of April.

"JOHN W. TWITCHELL,
"U. S. Marshal, Missouri District."

A large concourse of people were congregated at Jefferson City from far-distant placesmen, women, and children-to witness the spectacle of the execution, and every preparation had been made.

It is not stated in the Intelligencer, in which we find the account, what offence the Indian had committed; but we are told that "many of of Aldermen rejected the Mayor's nomination of the citizens of Jefferson City did not think him John Grinder, as police constable of the Fifth guilty, while a large portion of the community Ward, and confirmed unanimously that of Wm. opposed the execution on the ground that he Martin to supply a vacancy in the Fourth Ward. ought not to be dealt with like a white man, The Board of Common Council passed a bill apwho is taught from infancy to fear the consequences of the commission of crime."

reprieve was not despatched to the President | ing water through the building, a spring-house until the 13th.

this man is not, under the laws of the country, streets. deserving of death, suggests a fearful commentary upon the continued infliction of the death penalty, and should bring home to the mind of every man a sense of his responsibility for the existence of such a law, as unnecessary for the preservation of public morals as it is variant to the sentiments of humanity and the precepts of enlightened Christianity.

It is a trite expression, that "life depends upon a single thread." In this instance, had any one of a series of wires, of thousands of MR. GLIDDON's first special lecture, excitement existed in the atmosphere, at any will be given.

AMERICAN TELEGRAPH point in the long line, the message of mere could not have been received, the wretched culprit would have perished, and thousands of "men, women, and children" would have gone away from the place of death to "the far distant places" of their abodes, with the blood of that man upon their hands; for every one is responsible for the deed who assents to it.

A DIFFICULTY SETTLED .- We learn that the Examiner, and Mr. Scott, late a representative of Powhatan in the Legislature of Virginia, has been amicably and honorably settled.

The above is stated in many of the papers we have to-day received, and we hope it is true; vet, we cannot refrain from saying that, dead or alive, the gentlemen spoken of cut a very ridiculous figure. They mistake the sentiments of the times altogether, and hope to win admiration by doing what nearly one-half of mankind regard with abhorrence, and the other half with scorn. We have spoken with contempt merman, who fought a prize-fight near this city, yesterday; yet, were we to regard the actions of the two braces of personages as the true indices to the state of heart and tone of honorable sentiment, we would rather be the ruffian bully than the gentlemanly murderer.

Had Messrs. Daniel and Scott the courage to remain in Richmond and war with the weapons of truth, and confide in the awards of honest and just men, their position to-day would be such as to entitle them to the respect of their countrymen.

We take no pleasure in the use of unkind words, and we are without prejudice respecting either of these gentlemen; but they have put themselves up as targets, and ought not to complain for being shot at.

CITY WATCH-HOUSE.

One man, very Dutch and very drunk, had the calaboose all to himself this morning. We understand that John H. Goddard, esq. the Chief of the Police, (who is a Justice of the Peace,) has established his office at the Watchhouse, and will discharge the duties of that station. We regret that a more suitable building cannot be provided for his use. In the principal room there is not space enough for the thirtyodd officers who nightly come up to report themselves; and in the part allotted for prisoners. color has to be disregarded in order to separate the sexes-and so small and confined are the apartments that a pestilential impurity is alwavs feared. Added to this, we may remark, that upon the occasions frequently occurring for confidential conversation between the police of- soft-boiled eggs at breakfast this morning. ficers and persons having business with them, whether it rain or shine, the Market-house is the only place to which they can resort.

This is all very shameful, and should be corected.

TO-DAY.

We were dreaming of showers when the day dawned, and we realized our dreams on awaking. Phe streets are flooded, and the rain still patters. People generally look uncomfortable, and the wise wear their old clothes and the foolish spoil their new ones. They who can, stay within doors; and they who must, go out. The marketplace looks desolate, though the vegetables look quite fresh. Umbrellas are swopped at the street doors, the old ones being left without claimants. Many people are even looking blue, the weak desponding, and the strong-hearted hoping for the coming of the golden sun. Still the clouds lower everywhere, except on the hearts of the good and charitable, where the sunshine is ever

P. S .- The rain has ceased, the clouds have 'moseyed," the sun appears, and our spirits and the flower-gardens droop no more.

Such is an April day.

A SAD DILEMMA!

We yesterday met upon the street a very pretty and prettily-dre approached her, our eyes fell modestly to the ground, of course, as it appeared that her's did also, for she suddenly exclaimed, "OH, MY !" and drew the skirt of her dress back to look at her feet with evident horror. She had forgotten this morning. to change her shoes, and the old prunellas she wore were sadly ruptured at the sides. She turned about and hastened home, as though she fancied ten thousand handsome young men (like ourselves!) were all gazing at her broken shoes and pretty feet through twice as many eyeglasses.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION. The newspapers in the anthracite and Cumberland interests respectively are having a flare-up. The Cumberland Civilian, though of the soft-coal region, appears to be rather hard for the Pennsylvania editors-and, to tell the truth, not so susceptible of ignition, nor so selfconsuming.

ALMOST A CONFLAGRATION. At about 10 o'clock last night, a chimney in the house of James M. Caustin, esq., F street, near 15th, took fire, and there was a very fair probability of that house and the entire row being consumed. Fortunately, Mr. J. P. Hilton, a watchman at the Treasury Department, was prompt to render his aid; and ascending upon a fearfully steep roof, and amidst a shower of fire-flakes, received bucket after bucket-ful of water from the trap-door, and extinguished the burning shingles in a hundred places. We saw this intrepid and worthy man after the danger was over, and marvelled much how he had withstood the shower of fire, of which his clothes bore such ample testimony.

EXTRACTS from the Annual Report of the Grand Worthy Patriarch of the Grand Division of the District of Columbia.

Let us return unfeigned thanks to the Giver of all good for having preserved us from the pestilence which is the great universal pestilence, and which daily destroys such numbers of our fellow-citizens and desolates so many fam-ilies throughout our land and throughout the whole human race—for having preserved our Order in a position efficiently to contend with the great enemy of mankind— INTEMPERANCE. * * * * Although the additions t our Order are numerous, the increase for the last year is out order are inductous, the increase for the last year is not apparent in our jurisdiction, owing to the fact that many members neglect to keep their dues regularly paid up, and neglect to attend the meetings regularly, even when neither their families nor business claim their attention; the habitual non-attendance of members at their Division meetings is perhaps the greatest cause of delin-quency. The Worthy Patriarchs and all members should endeavor to make the meetings as attractive as possible, by reading short articles on Temperance, &c., (when not otherwise engaged.) * * * * A very prominent cause, preventing the success of the Sons of Temperance in their great and good work, is the disposition of many to join other beneficial organizations. The effect of this practice is—the ceremonies of some orders being novel and more attractive to some persons than the beautiful simplicity of our Order—they neglect their Division meetings, and thus lessen their efficiency and utility in the cause. The Sons of Temperance are united for the promulgation and perpetuation of a great moral principle; they exist in every city, town and village of any considerable size throughout our broad land; in the British provinces and in Europe their organization is complete and perfect, and their effideavor to make the meetings as attractive as possib their organization is complete and perfect, and their eff their organization is complete and perfect, and their efficiency commensurate to the great work which they have undertaken; and by a steady adherence to their philanthropic and noble principles, many of the present generation may hope to see our country redeemed from the greatest curse that ever afflicted mankind—the sale and use of alcohol as a beverage; when the strange, unnatural, unjust, and anomalous legislation, licensing men to poison their neighbors for a fee, will be abolished by the potentheir neighbors for a fee, will be acousined by the progressive enlightenment of a healthful public opinion. What benefit, then, is it to the community or to the great cause of Temperance, for Sons of Temperance to join Orders which can only be found in particular localities, "few been on a visit to Baltimore and Washington, people, particularly when by doing so they neglect their ate their utility as Sons of Temperance? I would recom-mend to all Sons of Temperance, who have joined the Or-der for the advancement of the great cause to which the Order is devoted, to remain Sons of Temperance, and noth-ing cise, (except as members of the public Washingtonian Societies,) as I am convinced that the Sons of Temperance is the only organization which can effect the great object in view. I would reiterate the recommendation of the late Grand Worthy Patriarch to the Grand Division, and the different subordinate divisions, that public meetings be held at the time of the quarterly sessions of the Grand Division; also, that subordinate divisions hold frequent public meetings, and have a pledge ready to receive the names of ladies and youths, and such men who cannot or will not join the Order; in this way the "Sons" will sup-ply the places of the old Washingtonian Societies where they have ceased to hold meetings, and then the Sons of remperance may confidently look to for, and ask a blessing of, the Giver of all good, on their efforts to promote the great cause, and to hasten the "good time coming" when there will not be a distillery or grogshop left to curse our country, or a drunkard left to disgrace human-ity.
